What Is the TPP?
The Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) is an international trade and investment pact currently being negotiated behind closed doors between the United States and countries throughout the Pacific Rim.

Corporations behind the TPP include Bank of America, Koch Industries, Citigroup, Pfizer, Cargill, ExxonMobil, Chevron, Monsanto, Verizon, Wal-Mart and many others.

Corporate interests want to use the TPP to:

• Offshore good-paying jobs to low-wage nations and under-cut working conditions globally
• Create new tools for attacking environmental and consumer safety policies
• Expand the deregulation of banks, hedge funds and insurance companies
• Institute longer patents that restrict access to affordable, generic medications

While approximately 600 corporate lobbyists have been given special status to review negotiating documents and advise negotiators, the general public has been barred from reviewing what U.S. negotiators have proposed in our names.

The twelfth major round of TPP negotiations is taking place in Dallas this May. Please join us dragging these negotiations out of the shadows and ensuring that we aren’t saddled with a back-room deal that enriches the 1% at the expense of the economy, the environment, family farms, public health, indigenous rights, Internet freedom and democracy itself.
